

BRAIN BUSTER- PUZZLE 4

A Symptom of Dementia:

Nervousness Around Large Groups
People who are diagnosed with dementia go through many stages. One of those is feeling extremely nervous around large groups of people even if these people are close friends or family members. A person with dementia becomes very insecure around large groups because they may not be able to express themselves and communicate clearly, also the faces in the group may no longer be familiar to them.

How would you feel about being in a room full of people you don't recognise and they don't understand you?
