

BRAIN BUSTER- PUZZLE 9

A Symptom of Dementia:

Dependence

People who are diagnosed with dementia go through many stages. One of those is dependence.

In the early stages a person with dementia doesn't want to lose their independence, they may have been the family member who did the budgeting, brought in the income and they don't want to be seen or classed as useless, that they can still provide and support their families and themselves.

This makes it very difficult for family members and carers to intervene as the person with dementia may become aggressive and abusive.
